Quarry issue rocks Furnace residents

By JAMES COOK
Times Editor

It took nearly three and half hours, some of that was intense, but it may not matter much when a decision has to be made following a permit conference held last Thursday at the Powell County Courthouse. The meeting was held by members of state's Energy and Environment Cabinet, Kentucky Department for Natural Resources. The director of the Division of Mine and Reclamation and Enforcement, Billy A Ratliff, led the six member committee to hear concerns from Powell County residents over a proposal for a new rock quarry. As one resident put it, the opinions of 100 people does not matter apparently.

That quarry would be located, according to the application filed by Red River Materials, LLC, just 425 feet west of Knowlton Road and Furnace Road, and approximately a quarter of a mile from Pecks Creek.

The Powell Circuit Courtroom was packed and had standing room only status for most of the three and a half hour meeting. A handful of the crowd wore stickers proclaiming "Citizens for Jobs for Powell County." But the majority of the over 150 people were clearly against a quarry opening up.

The majority of the speakers, each speaker had to sign in before the meeting to speak, were solidly against allowing the permit. It took 20 minutes to get everyone seated and speakers signed up to begin the meeting.

Most of the crowd who lives on Furnace expressed their concerns with several issues. Those ranged from the Court rules in favor of clinic

City could appeal decision on suboxone clinic

By JAMES COOK
Times Editor

It appears that the Renewed You Clinic will stay open despite the City of Stanton's efforts to show that their existence violated zoning ordinances. The ruling from Powell Circuit Judge Frank Fletcher on June 9 fell in favor of the clinic remaining open.

The clinic has been a lightning rod since it was first announced in January that it would open. The clinic tries to help people addicted to narcotics to get off of those medications. They use another narcotic, suboxone, to treat their patients.

The court ruled that under the Americans With Disabilities Act, that people seeking treatment for such addictions could fall under the ADA. The court based that on federal court findings on other jurisdictions. The courts in those cases said that zoning could not be used to stop a clinic like this from opening. The Powell Circuit Court also ruled that other businesses were close to the area, which the city has stated is a residential area. The summary judgement also stated that the property owner, a partner with the new clinic, Ann Cecil, worked in "good faith" to keep the utilities paid on the property. She also used "good faith" as she sought to find another doctor or clinic to use her late husband's, Dr. Sam Cecil, building.

The city filed a suit against their own zoning board of adjustments in February after a conditional use permit was granted for the clinic. The city still contended that their own zoning ordinances, which have been in place for more than 20 years, does not allow the property to be used as a clinic again. The clinic owners argue that the property owner has kept the zoning classification despite not actually conforming to the zoning ordinance.

Under the zoning ordinance if a property which has been given a non-conformity permit does not perform that same use for over a year, then the property would revert back to a R-1 residential status, if it is in such a zone. The clinic is in fact in a residential area.

The building used to house the offices of Dr. Sam Cecil until his death in 2009. His wife, Anne, is the property owner. The clinic owners have stated that the property was grandfathered in as a business. They claim that another clinic was there after Dr. Cecil's death and that Ms. Cecil has operated a charitable organization in the building.

But the city has countered in their new motion that the zoning ordinance is clear and that the other medical providers only used the clinic for part of 2010. There is no record of a clinic or medical facility being licensed in that building for over three years.

Property owners located in the area have also become a part of the case. They have stated in motions previously filed with the city that the clinic could create more traffic in an already busy part of town, as well as have other adverse affects on their properties.

The city has been asking that the court send the case back to the board of adjustments because they did not receive accurate information to make a decision. City attorney Scott Graham noted in the new motion that the original application for the clinic stated that the property was zoned as a B-1, business, and that the purpose for using the building was for a "tough love clinic."

Graham's motion on behalf of the city stated that the board was given the wrong zoning and that nowhere in the zoning ordinances is there a classification that allows opening a "tough love clinic."

The clinic has been a source of controversy since the beginning. While the owners, Allen Sperry and Dr. William Crowe, have stated the need for such a clinic and that they went through the proper channels by speaking to local leaders, some community leaders have countered that it seemed that the clinic sneaked into the county.

Most local leaders have indicated that they believe something needed to be done to help the drug addiction problems in the areas, but that there should have been more discussion before it opened. The clinic has opened their doors to the public to see exactly what it is that they do. But the feeling that they came in without getting more of a feeling about what the community wanted has been tough for some residents to overcome.

The court ruled once that the ADA was a factor and had both sides submit motions to argue their case. The city filed first and then the clinic owners. Both sides continued their arguments dealing with zoning ordinances and other businesses in the residential area.

The court's latest ruling says that those with disabilities cannot be discriminated against. It also quoted a decision from U.S. Ninth Circuit Court in California that stated, "the city may consider legitimate safety concerns in its zoning decisions, it may not base its decisions on the perceived harm from stereotypes and generalized fears."

The city has expressed concerns over such a clinic being

Senior math credit topic of board’s discussion

By JAMES COOK
Times Editor

The Powell County School Board heard an idea from their high school principal that makes a lot of sense, but some incoming seniors may not think so. If accepted the seniors will have to not only take a math class, but pass it too. The class would now become part of the 28 credits a student would need to graduate.

According to PCHS Principal Kendal Kerns the current set up has students being required to take three years of math. So when the fourth year comes along, there is no real incentive to pass the math class.

“I understand that some kids will not be going to college. The curriculum could be tweaked to be a job ready math class. But right now it puts the teachers in a bad situation as there are no incentives for the kids to pass the class,” Kerns told the board. “It is a disservice to our staff and our students.”

Board member Diane

Meadows asked if the English classes were required for all four years and Kerns advised that they were. But math, even though there is a senior math class, is not by the Powell County Schools.

“In checking with other schools in neighboring counties, they require the senior math class,” Kerns said. “Earning that credit is required.”

Kerns said he did not want to add any more credits to the graduation requirements as it pertained to the number needed. But he did want to make the senior math class part of the 28 credits required to earn a diploma.

The board seemed to favor the idea, but decided to table the issue and look into it further. That decision could be forthcoming by the end of the month. The board has scheduled a special meeting to discuss the district’s policy and procedures for June 23. That meeting will be at 6 p.m. at the central office.

The board took some time to view a ten minute video dealing with distracted drivers and what could happen due to texting and driving. The video used local emergency crews, medical helicopters, local officials and students. It was part of the pre-prom mock wreck the school system puts on about every four years.

Powell County native Jon Skidmore, who currently produces hunting shows for cable networks, filmed and produced the video. He, as well as everyone involved was honored by the board. Skidmore donated a lot of his time and talents to make the DVD. The message was quite sobering, according to several board members after watching it.

The board listened to four change order requests for the high school construction project. The school has been going through an addition and renovation project for most of the school year. Weather and a few unforeseen issues with supplies has delayed the project some.

The board approved $1,692 for a light, fire alarm pull station and an exit sign for a door in the addition. They also approved paying Marillia Design and Construction $3,252 for emergency roof overflows on he roof. A change in roofing material brought about this change.

The board also approved $4,566 for expansion joints at corridor connectors. The firm explained that the connectors needed would be larger than first anticipated due to the construction needs to build the addition. The last change order approved involved extending roof material up a parapet wall. That amount was for $4,061.

Board members Donald Curtis and David Griffin asked several pointed and somewhat tongue-in-cheek questions about the exit sign and connectors. Both stating that they were items that should have been planned for from the beginning. The votes to approve each change order was unanimous.

The school system has a contingency amount set aside for such change orders. According to the school system about $30,000 of the over $100,000 contingency has been used and it appears that under the current plans there should be no problem handling the change orders.

In other actions the board approved several trips for students in their consent agenda vote. Rips top basketball camps, volleyball camps and a trip to Hawaii for the art club and business club at the high school was approved.

The board also approved the extra service schedule, extended day pay schedule and substitute teacher pay schedules. The pay schedules for certified and classified staff members was also approved. So too was the planned athletic service pay schedule. That schedule, despite being frozen for a year, got back on schedule last year. It had been approved by the board nearly four years ago.

Powell Fiscal Court settling business before end of the fiscal year

By JAMES COOK
Times Editor

The Powell County Fiscal Court handled a lot of business last Tuesday night as the end of the fiscal year looms closer. But despite all they accomplished a special meeting later in the month will probably be necessary just to make sure all things are settled before June 30.

But the court did manage to go ahead and plan for next winter, as well as look at some options to refinance the jail. They even agreed to purchase a new ambulance for the county.

But before the meting opened they honored Virgil Patrick with a moment of silence. Patrick attended many of the fiscal court meetings just to hear what was happening each month. Patrick passed away a couple of weeks ago.

The magistrates listened as Powell County Judge Executive James Anderson introduced Keith Brock from the Kentucky Association of Counties (KACo). Brock talked to the court about the various financing option available to refinance the jail. The county has several loans that will be coming due over the next few years, including a balloon payment due in two years. Those loans covered all the work and other expenses the jail had over the years.

Brock told them that under one loan, refinancing now could save the county nearly $3,000 per month and overall could present the county with a three to five percent threshold. “It is a good time to refinance,” Brock advised the magistrates.

Anderson asked about using local banks in the process and Brock advised that KACo will try to promote local businesses. “We will try to structure it the way you want then go see if they (local banks) can do it,” Brock answered Anderson’s inquiry.

As for bond options Brock said that local banks will rarely go with a fixed rate. “The capital market is the best way to go for one that will be five years or more,” he added. The court listened and will review the information. Another presentation is expected next month.

Anderson then told the board that due to the problems with obtaining road salt last winter he had a plan he would like to try. Anderson said that the salt shortages created a problem and he would like to take the two lowest bids, so if the lowest bid ran out the county could quickly get salt from the other company. Both companies with the lowest bid appeared to come from Detroit.

After some discussion about how it would be handled and if two bids could be accepted, the magistrates voted unanimously to try this option.

The magistrates also approved the bid from Muster Emergency for a Chevrolet van type II ambulance. The bid was $76,880. The county’s ambulance fleet is getting older and a new unit is needed to help as the older units began to either be worked out of service or need to be serviced.

In other actions the magistrates heard from Powell County Public Library Director Mark Wetherington about all of the improvements that have taken place since he was hired. The library has replaced the carpet. Reorganized the library and worked to make it easier to access information and books. Wetherington thanked the county for all the help they have given and is looking forward to a few more changes to make the library “one the people and the community can be proud of.”

The magistrates also agreed to allow Anderson to start looking for another tractor to assist the county road department with mowing duties. The department is already down one tractor and needed the equipment. They also approved the “pre-approval items” that the county needs to take care of each month. Those items include salaries, utilities, retirement and even health insurance. “They are the items that can’t wait for the fiscal court to act on each month,” Anderson said. “They need to be paid each month.” The vote to approve was also unanimous.

Editorial: The people have spoken, jobs are needed but at what cost?

It is said that most people do not care what happens to others, as long as it does not affect them. Once something affects our way of life, or we perceive it to have an affect, then we usually jump into action. That is exactly what happened last week at a permit conference meeting at the Powell County Courthouse.

Last Thursday a meeting was held so the public could express their opinions and concerns about a proposed limestone rock quarry that could be opened on 44.3 acres of land in the Furnace Mountain area of Powell County. The proposed mine, a pit-style mine according to documents, would be approximately 425 feet off of Furnace and Knowlton Road, as well as be about a quarter of a mile from Peck's Creek, a water source that empties into the Red River.

The land owner, a Powell County resident, is selling the property to a company known as Red River Materials, LLC. A check of the Kentucky Secretary of State website only lists an article of organization filed for the company. No list of board of directors. No list of managers. Only a name and a post office box address in Lexington. By the way it is totally legal, they are following the law.

The idea is that there is rock that can be mined there and jobs would come to Powell County. It should be a winning solution to an area that has been hammered during the tough economic times our county, state and nation have faced for far too long now.

But there is a beautiful environment, peaceful place and wildlife, as well as water tables that would be affected. More importantly, there are families that can and will be affected. People who chose to settle on Furnace for the great qualities it has. The blasting and trucks using a small roadway would create havoc, if not chaos to their worlds.

Let us not forget the property damage that residents fear could happen. What about lowering property values? Let us not forget the road conditions that are bearable now, with school buses and cars meeting on a narrow thoroughfare. Large trucks coming through, or the thought of one losing control coming down the mountain has many people, including this newspaper, a little wary of the possibilities.

But our job is not to really take sides unless there is only one reasonable side that clearly stands out.

We do need jobs in this county. It is a promise and talking point every politician who runs for a local office preaches hard, but in actuality the battle to bring jobs here is not easy. We remember the jobs that were here in the 80's and 90's. But those factories are long gone. We have watched as more and more of our neighbors have to go further and further each day to find work. We have watched as smaller businesses have also been affected and we have seen the unemployment rates climb, drop, then climb again. It is heart-breaking.

The addition of a wood working plant in Clay City that could bring up to 100 jobs over the next few years is a start. So there is no doubt jobs are needed here, if we wish to keep our young people here.

But to what degree are we willing to bring in jobs?

One of the residents at the meeting asked a question that simply stated, "How do you justify houses destroyed for jobs?" That is a very good question. One that deserves an answer, not a pass-the-buck response. Not a response that sounds more like the meeting is just a formality, as if a favor is being done, let the people air their issues, but as long as a company meets the checklist of things to do, then a permit is issued.

Like another resident said it seemed that, "The opinion of 100 people doesn't matter."

We know the state officials on hand at the meeting have a job to do and have to follow regulations. Many questions they could not answer such as what hours would the mine operate, what about blasting, road plans and other issues that maybe the company wanting the permit could answer. But they were not there.

We would suggest that the state put the permit request on hold indefinitely because there are way too many questions that need to be answered. Then we believe the committee should look deeply and sincerely at the concerns of the community. It was quite obvious how the crowd felt last week. Consider a packed courtroom with no public notice about the meeting, just word of mouth.

Do we want to see Powell County prosper? Of course we do! Do we want to see jobs come here? Yes!

Can the company guarantee no damage to property and all jobs will go to Powell County residents? We do not think we can answer for them, they need to come answer for themselves.

But overall we as a community need to get together more often and find ideas and opportunities to bring jobs to Powell County. Not just when our livelihood, homes or peace and quiet is endangered. The fiscal court meets the second Tuesday each month. The Stanton City Council meets the second Thursday and Clay City meets the third Monday. Let them hear your concerns and ideas. After all they work for you.

At this time we, in good conscious cannot unequivocally back a rock quarry coming in due to the concerns the residents have and the lack of information that has been given. We generally side with the people, since Abraham Lincoln himself said this country is one "of the people, for the people and by the people."

But we also want to ask the "idea people," those wanting to help this community, to keep striving to find ways to bring jobs here. Do not give up, keep trying – our kids future is worth it.

This community is worth fighting for, be it for Furnace, Cane Creek, West Bend, Knowlton, Slade or any area inside our borders. Let this fight be one that moves us to pull together to find better ways to move Powell County forward.

Proposed mining project threatens safety of children, residents of Furnace Mountain

By STEVE DAY
Guest Columnist

If you haven't taken a drive up Furnace Mountain lately, you should soon because the peaceful drive and the beautiful surroundings are in danger of being lost to Powell County forever. Many of the people that live on Furnace Mountain have bought property and invested all they have into their places. Many have lived there for generations and some have left busy cities to relocate there but regardless all appreciate its beauty, tranquility and grandeur. After having a very small advertisement run (on the 13th page of the Clay City Times) about Red River Materials LLC intent to mine Furnace Mountain, a permit has been applied for to turn part of Furnace Mountain into a limestone surface mine.

I attended the meeting on the evening of Thursday, June 12, to discuss concerns and objections of those living on Furnace Mountain, Pecks Creek and Cat Creek. There were approximately 200 people that showed up for the meeting even though there was no public advertisement of the event. The meeting was disorganized, with the coordinators not even having a fully operational camera to record the meeting, and the plan was not outlined by Red River Materials, or a representative the applicant. Those that conducted the meeting answered relatively few of the questions & objections raised by citizens of Powell County. Many people, including myself, got the feeling that this is being railroaded through regardless. Contributing to this feeling was the response of the chair person that many of the concerns raised were not his department but shifted the burden over to other departments like the Department of Transportation, even though the regulations from the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet clearly contain information regarding many of the objections. Below I will outline just a few:

Some objected about the safety of our children. Concerns have been raised about having Large Trucks hauling rock coming down Furnace. The road being steep and quite narrow which can hardly handle two trucks passing each other as is. Not to mention, have you ever encountered a school bus while traveling up (Highway) 213? It is enough to make your heart stop! Can you imagine encountering a haul truck? Or even worse, what would happen if a school bus and a hauling truck met each other? I am not prepared to lose even one life, not to mention a school bus of children for this mining operation. Yet, when this was brought up, the chairperson said it would have to be taken to the DOT, that it wasn't his department. This is not true. The Regulations for Permit requirements (405 KAR 5:030E) clearly states in Section 20 Transportation Plan that "the application shall clearly contain a plan for the transportation on minerals over public roads." "That the plan shall state the legal weight limits and vehicle size limits for each roadway or bridge" and "the plan shall describe the anticipated average number of trucks per working day that will traverse each part of the state and county road systems, and the anticipated dimensions, gross vehicle weight, and number of axles of the trucks."

The Knowlton Church on Furnace has been there since the 1970's and concern was raised about what this would do to the church, yet little credence was given him, but the regulations under Section 28, Criteria for Permit Approval and Denial, states "that the mine cannot be within 300 feet...of a church, community or institutional building."

We have concerns over waters that flow down Pecks and Cat Creeks which originate from Furnace, we have concerns to our gas and water wells being diminished or destroyed. We have concerns over the noise, the dust, our health from breathing more limestone dust and the list goes on and on. People of Powell County and Eastern Kentucky, my family moved here because we wanted to get away from the hustle and bustle of city life and enjoy these hills and raise our children close to nature. It does not take long driving through rural Appalachia to see the scars left from surface mines that have folded and left mountain tops and hillsides destroyed. We implore you to not let big businesses destroy what we have, because when it is gone it won't come back.

If you are desirous of notifying someone why you think this mine shouldn't happen, please send a letter to Mark Tarter with your objections. His address is below.

Settling business before fiscal year ends; honors a familar face

By JAMES ANDERSON,
Powell County Judge Executive

The Powell County Fiscal Court's regularly scheduled monthly meeting was held this last Tuesday with all members of the court present for roll call.

After roll call I made those present aware that if they looked to the back of the room they would notice someone missing. In honor of the passing of Virgil Patrick we had a moment of silence. For those of you who didn't know Mr. Patrick, he was one of our citizens who attended all of our fiscal court meetings. Our thoughts and prayers continue for the family and friends of Mr. Patrick.

Next, we dispensed of the financial portion of the meeting and went on into old business. In the old business portion, court members were provided with a copy of this past year's audit.

Starting the new business portion of the meeting, our public library director Mark Wetherington came before the court with a presentation.

Mr. Wetherington made the court aware of the changes that had taken place since his becoming director. He had a slide show that showed many exciting programs and improvements that have been made. We would like to thank Mr. Wetherington for taking the time to make the public aware of how their funds are being used and for the fine work he and his staff are doing.

Jail refinancing was the next item touched on. We had a representative from KACO come and make a presentation on what options would be available as well as what the outcomes of each option would be. This is an issue you have heard me talk about before and am very much in favor of as it offers us the chance to save some money as well as it addresses a balloon payment we have coming up in a few years which is going to force us to restructure our debt anyway. We are having another individual come next month as well with some more information on the subject.

The next item to come before the court was road salt bids. Before we opened the bids I suggested that we look at the possibility of accepting the two lowest bidders as opposed to only one as a means of diversifying our options. Upon review of the bids we voted to accept the two lowest vendors with the understanding we would use low bidder as long as they were able to meet our orders. This should give us another means of addressing a bad winter.

A piece of equipment for the road department was the next item discussed. I made the court aware of the need for an additional tractor for mowing. All members were open to moving forward with this potential purchase.

The treasurer presented court with a pre-approval list for the 2014-2015 budget. This is done annually and has to be revisited each fiscal year. The court voted to approve the treasurer's request.

The Powell's Valley Water Board request to reappoint Dave Plessinger was honored as the court voted to accept this appointment.

The next several items consisted of approving resolutions with the State Board of Elections, Montgomery County Jail, and Bluegrass ADD. The first was for reimbursement for election expenses. The second was to allow for housing of inmates should we need additional space. The last was to reapply for a CDBG grant to construct a new Senior Citizen Center.

The last items addressed by the court were brought by Ambulance Director Brinton Epperson. First was the approval of his personnel changes. The second was to approve purchase of new ambulance which had been bid out.

Once again I would like to encourage anyone who has questions, concerns, or ideas to feel free to contact me.

LETTERS To THE EDITOR

Reader thankful for quick response

Letter to the Editor:
Last week my mother was cleaning her room and gave her telephone a good scrubbing, accidentally calling 911. She was surprised to find Sargent Watson of the Stanton Police at her door a few minutes later.
Thank you Sgt. Watson for a quick response to my mother, even though it was a false alarm. There's comfort in knowing people are here when we need them.
Thank you to all the officers, Danny McCormick and the ambulance service for putting their lives on the line for us every day.
Sincerely,
Diana Caudill

Ashley Brown Brown graduates, receives scholarship

Ashley Brown, 17, formerly of Stanton, graduated from Lincoln Park High School in Lincoln Park, Michigan with honors on Wednesday, June 7. During Senior Awards, Ashley was recognized by Phi Beta Kappa and the U.S. Marines for academic excellence and received the Gold Academic Excellence Award.

During her time at Lincoln Park High School, Ashley has been the Vice-President of the National Honor Society and the Elementary Liaison for the National Honor Society, as well as being very active in Student Council. She also received many scholarships with the most noteworthy being a scholarship from Michigan Technological University for Leading Scholars and the Annexstad Foundation Scholarship. The Annexstad Foundation Scholarship guarantees Ashley a full scholarship for her entire college career. This scholarship is a prestigious national scholarship and cannot be applied for. Recipients must be nominated by a university.

Ashley will attend Michigan Technological University in Houghton, Michigan in the fall and plans on pursuing a career in metallurgical engineering.

Ashley resides with her grandparents, Kathy and Dave Howells. She is the daughter of Tonya Watkins, Stanton, and Ricky Brown, Jeffersonville. She is the sister of Danielle Cooper and Austin Smith, both of Clay City. She is also the granddaughter of Sam Rogers and Sharon Overpeck, Clay City, who have been very supportive. Ashley has a very special great-grandmother, Nannie Willoughby, who lives in Clay City. Ashley plans to visit family and friends in Kentucky later in the summer before she moves to the Upper Peninsula.

allowed to operate in that area, near a school. Local law enforcement has also expressed their concerns over the drug being distributed, based on information they have from other agencies that deal with such clinics. Several arrests in recent months have found suspects with suboxone on their person, though it was not clear if they had a subscription or not for the narcotic.

Clinic owners and doctors have stated that they have protocols in place to make sure they are treating people who really need the help. They also have admitted in the past that there is no way to prevent someone from abusing the product by selling it.

The court also ruled that Ann Cecil “continued in good faith effort to lease the property in question.” The court ruled that Cecil should not be “penalized for the death of her husband and the unavailability of a lessee at the moment of Dr. Cecil’s death.”

Record seem to indicate, according to Fletcher’s ruling, that Cecil maintained the property as a medical clinic, paid the insurance and paid property taxes.”

The ruling denies the city and nearby property owners motion, but grants the clinic’s motion. The decision is appealable. Graham told the city council last Thursday, before going into a closed session to discuss it, that he was disappointed and disagreed with the decision. “We will have to talk about it and see where to go from here,” he advised.

According to the city council after the closed session, no action was taken at this time. It is not clear if The city will appeal.

Prevent the ‘Summer Slide’ for your children at the public library

By WAYNE ONKST
Guest Columnist

Summertime is here, and public libraries across Kentucky are offering a wide variety of summer reading activities for Kentucky families. Last year, 145,681 children in the Commonwealth participated, enjoying fun activities, special programs, and the freedom to choose their own reading material. This long running annual program has demonstrated over the years that reading is a fun family activity that can help establish a lifelong love of reading. But for those children who participate, there is an even greater benefit.

Research has shown that children who don’t read or engage in enriching activities during the summer months suffer a phenomenon called summer slide. During the school year, middle-income and low-income children acquire reading skills at the same rate. Over the months of summer vacation, however, low-income children often lose skills while middle-income children steadily gain reading skills. The reading losses experienced by low-income students over the summer aren’t recovered during the school year. As these reading losses are cumulative from year to year, by sixth grade as much as 80 percent of the reading skills gap between children from low and middle-income families can be attributed to summer slide.

The public library is the perfect place to fight summer slide. Studies demonstrate that regardless of other activities, the best predictor of reading skill loss or gain over the summer is whether or not a child reads.

The theme for each library’s summer reading program is chosen locally, but many summer programs this year are emphasizing literacy, science and STEM (science, technology, engineering and math) activities. Not only will youth have a great time, but those who read even as few as five books over the summer will make clear gains in reading when returning to school in the fall. Children who spend approximately 11 minutes per day reading over the summer score in the 50th percentile in reading skills, while those who spend 38 minutes a day reading score in the 90th percentile.

Participating in your library’s summer reading program can be a great, free family activity that provides many hours of enjoyment and lifelong memories while giving children an academic boost in the fall. Come to your library this summer to celebrate one of Kentucky’s great traditions – summer reading!

Wayne Onkst is the State Librarian and Commissioner of the Kentucky Department for Libraries and Archives.

Marcum & Wallace named as top 100 hospital

Marcum & Wallace Memorial Hospital (MWMH) has ranked among the Top 100 Great Community Hospitals in the nation. In a list recently released by Becker's Hospital Review, the 2014 list of "100 Great Community Hospitals" was based on hospitals' accolades, quality of care and services provided to their patient populations. MWMH was one of three hospitals recognized in the state of Kentucky.

"The team at Marcum & Wallace continuously strives to give the patients in our region the highest quality of care possible," said Susan Starling, MWMH President & CEO. "It's nice to receive recognition for being a great community hospital because that's what is at the heart of our mission. Our hospital is here for the community we serve and our success is a result of the community support of our hospital." Starling also said most of the 175 employees live in the region MWMH serves, so that's what makes this award even more special.

The Becker's Hospital Review editorial team selected hospitals for inclusion based on rankings and awards from various organizations, including the American Hospital Association. Also taken into consideration was the Top 100 Critical Access Hospital list, which indicates the critical access hospital performs as well or better at the median overall than all U.S. general acute-care hospitals in clinical and operational performance and financial outcomes.

Marcum & Wallace Memorial Hospital is a licensed Critical Access Hospital with a Level IV Trauma Center, characterized by its family-centered care, community involvement and progressive ideas in healthcare. MWMH has modern facilities, state-of-the-art equipment, highly skilled professional personnel and a medical staff that offers primary care and a wide range of specialty services.

He will wipe away every tear from their eyes, and death shall be no more, neither shall there be mourning, nor crying, nor pain anymore, for the former things have passed away.

Bugs, bees, flys and ticks - The hot season is definitely here

By PATRICK M. MCCOY
Extension Ofc. Intern

Millions of Bugs

Over the last day or two, we have been getting many calls from frantic homeowners. The reoccurring theme among most of these calls seems to be that, “There are bugs covering my trees!” So here I go with a box of plastic baggies to take specimens and a curious mind to see what’s going on. After seeing it for myself, I can surely say that bugs are, in fact covering the effected trees.

The bugs in question were small, and grouped together on the bark of the trees. They seemed to be more concentrated on the moss or lichen covered areas, and also congregated in cracks or concealed areas of the bark.

After looking at the specimens and doing a lot of research I had figured it out! Turns out the little bugs that covered those trees and in the photo like the plague, were actually Barklice.

The Barklice or sometimes called “Tree Cattle” feed on the lichen and mosses or decaying matter that is on mature trees, crape myrtles and other hardwood ornamental plants. They do not feed on living plants so therefore they cause no damage.

Barklice are gregarious in nature so the group together in a small area. This leads to the usual response we see from gardeners when they think that the insects are feeding on their trees. Like I said before, it literally looks like a plague of insects are attacking the plants they are on, but they cause no harm.

Beekeepers to Meet

If you love our stinging friends the honeybee then the next item of business may interest you. On Thursday, June 26, at 6 p. m. we will be having the Beekeeper Field Day at the home of John and Teresa Koontz. Their residence is located at 532 Steam Shovel Road in Stanton, across the street from the county road department.

While there we will open up a few hives to view the progress the bees are making this season. This will be a great opportunity for any that may be interested. Please contact the Powell County Extension Office at 663-6405 with any questions you may have.

Don’t forget the Daylily Field Day

With daylilies starting to bloom, the Daylily Field Day is almost upon us. Join us on Wednesday June 25 as we travel to the Hickory Springs Daylily farm in Montgomery County. They have over 1,300 varieties of daylilies, with many that have been awarded and received recognitions.

We will leave the Powell County Extension Office at 9 a. m. There will be a guided tour with ample time for you to make purchases, if you so wish. In reviewing their promotional booklet, it seems as though they may start around $5 and may go as high as $60 per plant.

Please call the Powell County Extension Office at 663-6405 to let us know if you plan on attending this fun and educational event.

Fly Season is Upon Us

With the hot and humid days that we have been experiencing, the fly and tick populations have seemingly exploded. So now is the time to really start protecting our livestock from them. We need to make sure that the cattle rub rubs are up and medicated. It is best to hang these near mineral feeders or in gateways that livestock frequent. This will ensure that they actually use the rub and will make them use it often, to keep the flies off of them. Also many producers use pour on medications or sprays, which are scheduled throughout the season. Now is the time that those need to be done as well. It is so important to keep the flies off of your cattle because now is the time we will start to see pinkeye.

As always, it is best to vaccinate for pinkeye but occurrences of the condition still pop up from time to time in vaccinated herds. This is where the importance of fly control comes from, not to mention the discomfort and stress that flies can put on our animals.

Another thing we can do to lessen the incidences of pinkeye is keeping our pastures clipped and not letting cattle graze areas with dry seed heads of excessively stemmy forages. These can get into the livestock’s eyes causing discomfort and putting them at a greater risk of contracting pinkeye.

Along with the fly population, the tick population in our area seemed to explode after all the humid weather we were having. Ticks are another reason to be spraying or treating our cattle. During an already stressful time of the year for cattle, because of the heat, ticks and flies certainly aren’t helping any to lessen stress. So we need to get the cattle treated as soon as possible.

Also as always, treat issues quickly, the sooner an issue is caught and dealt with, the easier it is on the animal affected.

Don’t Forget About the Farmers Market

Through out Powell County the vegetable gardens are really taking off. The cabbage is starting to head and the beans are starting to vine. The same is especially true of the gardens tended by the Powell County Farmers Market members.

Not a day goes by that they aren’t out in the field, tending to the needs of their tomato plants and keeping a watchful eye on the potatoes for the Colorado potato beetle. Soon they will be bringing the produce that they have so carefully grown to the Farmers Market in Stanton and Clay City to showcase what they have grown. They do this with hope of being able to support their families and provide a good quality of produce to their customers. So if you see them out there in the hot sun, stop by and see what they have in regards to produce.

On that note, the Powell County Farmers Market is now on Facebook so feel free to like us and follow us on there. We will keep it updated with what producers have to sell, as well as any timely events we have planned.

Also hopefully the Facebook page will help you, the consumer, to see where your food comes from and the care that goes into producing it. The market, as always, will be set up on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and a half-day on Saturday in Stanton. The Clay City Market will be open Tuesday, Thursday and a half-day on Saturday.

If you have any questions about the Powell County Farmer’s Market then please contact us at the Powell County Extension Office at 663-6405.

Sharp (nka Peggy S. Plowman) and James Plowman, the following described property will be sold to the highest and best bidder:
A house and lot located at 206 Frames Branch, Clay City, KY 40312. Being the same property conveyed to mortgagor by deed dated the 30th day of September, 1999, and of record in Deed Book 157, page 542, Powell County Court Clerk’s office.
TERMS OF SALE: Ten percent (10%) of the bid price (in the form of a Cashier’s Check made payable to the U.S. Marshal) on the day of sale with good and sufficient bond for the balance, bearing interest at the rate of 0.12% per annum until paid, due and payable in sixty (60) days and said bond having the effect of a Judgment. Upon a default by the Purchaser, the deposit shall be forfeited and retained by the U.S. Marshal as part of the proceeds of the sale, and the property shall again be offered for sale subject to confirmation by the Court. This sale shall be in bar and foreclosure of all right, title, interest, estate claim, demand or equity of redemption of the defendant(s) and of all persons claiming by, through, under or against them, provided the purchase price is equal to two-thirds of the appraised value. If the purchase price is not equal to two-thirds of the appraised value, the Deed shall contain a lien in favor of the defendant(s) reflecting the right of the defendant(s) to redeem during the period provided by law (KRS 426.530). Under law, the purchaser is deemed to be on notice of all matters affecting the property of record in the local County Clerk’s Office.

Guest Columnist

All too often, tragedies happen, and they are devastating. Frequently, those commenting refer to these awful tragedies as “an act of God;” therefore they are assumed to be beyond all human control and responsibility.

“An act of God” has been defined as “a legal term for events outside human control, such as floods or other natural disasters, for which no one can be held responsible.” They happen, we are hurt, but the blame is somewhere else. Could it be that there is something more that can be said about these terrible tragedies?

At 5:12 in the morning on Wednesday, April 18, 1906, an earthquake of epic proportions hit California. That devastating earthquake led to the death of 3,000 people, the greatest loss of life from a natural disorder in California's history, and it destroyed over 80% of San Francisco. The estimated cost of the damage caused by that earthquake at the time was 400 million dollars. Based on today's economy, that would be 8.2 billion dollars.

Many times since that earthquake occurred, those commenting upon it have called that natural disaster “an act of God;” therefore the earthquake and the consequences of it were beyond human control and responsibility. But something more may be said. Charles L. Wallis, writing about that earthquake, has pointed out that a distinguished architect, after investigating the San Francisco tragedy, reported, “Dishonest mortar was responsible for nearly all the earthquake damage in San Francisco.”

There is an element of human control and responsibility. A house built with inferior material upon an unsubstantial foundation too close the river will be destroyed by a flood, and a house built with “dishonest mortal” upon a poor foundation over a fault will be destroyed by an earthquake. And it cannot be totally blamed upon “an act of God.”

Human responsibility is important. To withstand the natural disasters of life that are sure to buffet it, a house---and a life---must be built with “honest mortar” upon a substantial foundation.

KSP warns about the dangers of leaving children in hot cars

The Kentucky State Police remind parents not to leave a child alone in a hot car as temperatures in the Bluegrass are on the rise. It may seem like common sense, but every year law enforcement agencies answer calls about unattended children in vehicles. The National Safety Council (NSC) reports that nine children have already died in 2014 from being left in hot cars across the U.S.

An ongoing study by San Francisco State University estimates that since 1998, there have been 615 heatstroke deaths of children left in vehicles, an average of 38 deaths per year. Most of those deaths were children under the age of two-years.

In 2000, Kentucky passed “Bryan’s Law,” which makes a person liable for second-degree manslaughter or first-degree wanton endangerment for leaving a child younger than eight years of age in a motor vehicle where circumstances pose a grave risk of death. The law was named after 11-month old Bryan Puckett, who died July 13, 1999 after being left in a hot car by his babysitter.

KSP spokesman Sgt. Michael Webb says most people know the dangers of leaving a child in a hot car, but each year these senseless tragedies continue to occur.

“A child’s body heats up three to five times faster than that of an adult,” says Webb. “The temperature inside a car can rise 19 degrees in 10 minutes. Together, this can be deadly in a very short period of time.”

Kentucky’s last reported death from a child being left in a car was during 2012 in Louisville. The NSC reports that 44 children died last year from vehicular heatstroke in the U.S.

Webb offers the following safety tips:

- Never leave a child in an unattended car, even with the windows down.
- Be sure that all occupants leave the vehicle when unloading. Don’t overlook sleeping babies.

- Always lock your car. If a child is missing, check the car first, including the trunk. Teach your children that vehicles are never to be used as a play area.
- Keep a stuffed animal in the car seat and when the child is put in the seat place the animal in the front with the driver as a reminder.
- Place your purse or briefcase in the back seat as a reminder that you have your child in the car.
- Make ‘look before you leave’ a routine whenever you get out of the car.

Webb says while a person will face criminal charges for leaving a child in a car, the pain and guilt from making such a mistake will last far longer.

KSP asks citizens to keep an eye out for children left in vehicles on hot days and to call 911 if they think the occupant is in danger.

Extension celebrates 100 years of Volunteers

For the past 100 years, the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service has been successful in recruiting, developing and retaining high quality volunteers of all ages.

In 1914, the first home demonstration agents were hired to work with girl’s canning clubs and to teach food preservation to families. These first agents worked temporary during the summer months and laid the foundation for today’s Family and Consumer Sciences Extension programs. As home demonstration agents were hired full time beginning in 1915, home demonstration clubs began to emerge in Kentucky. Volunteer leaders have played an important role in Extension since these early days.

In 1932, a group of county home demonstration clubs formed a state organization now known as the Kentucky Extension Homemakers Association. The group was formed with the intent to unify and strengthen the efforts of Homemakers in Kentucky and to develop their leadership potential.

For more than 80 years, the Kentucky Extension Homemakers Association has provided continual and consistent volunteer service within the organization and in communities throughout the Commonwealth. KEHA members annually provide more than 500,000 volunteer hours for Extension activities and in their communities, often performing tasks and taking on roles that provide a savings of time and dollars for local governments.

Spurred by the diagnosis of one of their own, KEHA members have donated more than $1.2 million dollars to the UK Ovarian Cancer Research Program since 1977 to help save the lives of Kentucky women every day. They have also encouraged women they know to be screened for ovarian cancer, a free service at UK funded by their donations. Some even make it a group outing Extension vehicles full of women to Lexington.

In addition to local and statewide projects, the reach of KEHA members extends beyond the United States. As a member of the Associated Country Women of the World since 1936, KEHA annually contributes funds through ACWW to support projects in developing countries that empower families and improve health. Since 2008, KEHA has provided financial support and resources for the Kentucky Academy, a kindergarten in the village of Adjeikrom in Ghana. KEHA efforts have provided improved building facilities, construction of a kitchen and dining pavilion and a new water supply.

Trained and empowered volunteers are vital to the success of community organizations like KEHA. To address the ever-growing need for volunteers, the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service developed the “Kentucky Extension Leadership Development” curriculum. This curriculum provides a series of lessons for a facilitator to use to identify, mobilize and retain volunteers. The lessons develop core leadership skills in participants by helping them understand the differences in learning styles, generations and motivations, all while identifying their own leadership potential.

When a community has developed, experienced and dedicated volunteers, it is able to efficiently complete projects, as well as gather innovative ideas on how to unify and expand. When looking for high quality, dedicated volunteers of all ages, one rarely has to look farther than their local county Cooperative Extension Service.

Educational programs of the Cooperative Extension Service serve all people regardless of race, color, age, sex, religion, disability or national origin.

Bradley Cornett drives past two defenders (left) and the JV Pirates look for a good shot Monday afternoon. The Pirates took on Owsley County in a little summer ball action at Hazard.

The permit was filed in May, according to Ratliff, and has a 30 day time limit. However, Ratliff explained that the time was stopped so the permit conference could be held and the information reviewed. The time would begin again as soon as the information was reviewed. No final decision was made at the meeting.
